PERPETUUS

TERMINAL BREAKS

Always Here and Never There
40 x 35"

Acrylic and Oil on Canvas

Conceived and finished 1 month before the lock down in New York, the work now seems to foreshadow an epic event I could not predict. The vessel acts as a metaphor for both providing structure but distorting it. The graphic floral display is fantastical and flamboyant, and the composition as a whole asks a question about societies blurred understanding of reality vs virtuality.
